DAYLIGHT BURGLAR CAUGHT.

PROSPECTIVE HOUSE RENTERS FOUND HIM AT WORK.

Had Everything of Value Packed Up Ready for Removal—Crowd Hemmed Him in and Prevented Escape Until Police Arrived-Probably Robbed Many Houses.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., May 30 .- The residents of the vicinity of Gates avenue and Union street, his town, who did not go away to spend the holiday, participated to-day in a real burglar hunt that resulted in the capture of a negro burglar who, Chief of Police Gallagher believes, is one of a gang of thieves from whose depre-dations residents of Montelair and Upper Montelair have suffered for two months. during that time, ten houses have been en-tered and valuables and clothing to the value of more than $3,000 have been stolen. In all these cases the burglars entered through cellar or kitchen by sawing the locks off the doors, apparently with fine bandsaws.

The negro, who said that his name was Ernest Tasselman, but refused to tell any more about himself, was discovered in the act of robbing one of the handsomest residences in Montclair, shortly after noon. A man and his wife came out here from New York this morning with a view to renting a house for the summer. An agent sent them in a carriage to look at the Henry D. Baldwin house at 188 Union street.

They entered the house together, and as they stood in the big reception hall the woman said to her husband:

"I hear footsteps upstairs. The agent must have been mistaken when he told us that the people were away."

Her husband started upstairs to see who was there. Part way up he stopped and

There was no answer and, becoming frightened, the woman fled to a nearby house.

There were no men about, so the women got their servants together and sent them to help the stranger, who was signaling for help, feuring that if he made a noise the burglar, if there were one, would escape. Somebody telephoned to police headquarters, but before Chief Gallagher responded, a crowd had gathered. It was then noon. Grocers and butchers' boys, drivers and a postman joined the crowd and at a good safe distance all the women of the neighborhood gathered to see what would happen. Lots of people suggested plans for bringing the burglar into view, but it remained for the strange man to suggest throwing pebbles at the windows. This was done, and for the first time the burglar knew he was in trouble.

The crowd that now surrounded the house completely saw his scared face appear at a second story window, then at another window, until the burglar had completed the circuit and had discovered that he was hemmed in. He disappeared then and the excitement was at its highest when. after a few minutes' absence, he appeared at the kitchen door with a pistol in his hand. At the same instant Chief of Police Gallagher and Policeman Riley were getting ready to enter the house. Gallagher by the front door and Riley were getting ready to enter the house. Gallagher by the front door with his arms extended before him. His hands were empty and he shouted:

"I'm caught red handed. You've got me fair, and I give up. Come and get me." Chief Gallagher bounded up the doorstep extended before him. His hands were empty and he shouted:

"I'm caught red handed. You've got me fair, and I give up. Come and get me."

Chief Gallagher bounded up the doorstep and collared the negro before he had finished and in a minute more had him hand-cuffed. Riley searched the house. On the upper floor he found that every closet and bureau had been ransacked and that clothes, jewelry, silver and linen to the value of nearly $2,000 were packed in bundles ready for removal at night.

At police headquarters a pistol, a razor and a lot of keys were found in the negro's pockets. It was found that the negro had got into the house by sawing away the wood about the bolts on a basement door.

Henry D. Baldwin is a wealthy commission merchant in business in New York. He and his wife were away from home over Decoration Day. They left their house in care of real estate agents, who were trying to rent it for the summer for them.

The man and woman who discovered the burglar went back to New York without getting a house or telling their names.

The Rev. Dr George R. Van De Water, rector of St. Andrew's Protestant Episcowas about to leave his study a few nights ago when a rather seedy looking man met him at the door and started to tell him his troubles. The man said he was behind in his rent, and that if $10 was not paid by the next day his family would be put into the street. He said his friends were as poor as himself. He added that he had attended services at St. Andrew's, and felt that it would not be wrong to come to its rector to state his troubles. In order to show his good faith the man the next day. His friend smiled and told the rector that he had better send the watch and chain to a jeweller to learn if it wasn't brass. Dr. Van De Water gave the jewelry to F. E. Holmes, the sexton of the church, to have it tested.

A jeweller said that he would give $8 for the watch as old gold and $5 for the chain. When this information was imparted to the rector he felt greatly elated that the man had told him the truth. The watch and chain adorn the mantelpiece of the rector's study waiting for the man to come and

HELD ON ABDUCTION CHARGE.

GARFINKEL GIRL IN BELLEVUE TOO ILL TO GO TO COURT.

Two Men and Sadle Wolf Under $1,500 Ball -Charge, Luring Her From Uncle's Home-Reardon Denies Accusing Cottrell, Who Says He Got Busy at Once.

Pauline Garfinkel, who disappeared from the home of her uncle at 153 East 113th street almost three weeks ago, and who was found on Sunday by County Detectives Reardon and O'Shea in a respectable boarding house at 237 West Twenty-second street and taken from there to Bellevue Hospital, was unable to appear in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday when her alleged abductors were arraigned.

The prisoners were Charles Hirshkowitz of 223 East Tenth street, Philip Altman of 306 Madison street and Sadie Wolf, who lives on West Thirty-second street.

Harry Lane of 237 West Twenty-second went to District Attorney Jerome's house in Rutgers street last night and said he wished to give himself up if wanted. Lane has been sought by the police and the county detectives in connection with the Garfinkel case. He is the young man who took the girl from the house in West Thirty-second street.

At the District Attorney's house, Lane was met by County Detective Reardon. pal Church, at 127th street and Fifth avenue, He put Lane under arrest and took him to Bellevue Hospital. The girl, when she saw Lane, said that he had been her best

> "If it were not for him," she said, "I might yet been in that house." Lane explained that he had only tried > to help the girl in getting away from the place where she was kept a prisoner. Reardon had previously registered Lane > as a prisoner at the Fifth street station. After talking to the girl in the hospital, he let Lane go.

According to Detective Reardon, the girl made a statement to him yesterday morning in Bellevue Hospital in which she gave a detailed account of the treatment to which she had been subjected. She said that Altman had accomplished her ruin after taking her to Hirshkowitz's apartments. She was then taken to Sadie Wolf's house, she said, and her clothing was taken from her. She alleges she was there compelled to lead an immoral life. While she was in the Wolf woman's home Detective Reardon, who had been detailed by District Attorney Jerome to search for her, learned of her whereabouts and the police of the Tenderloin station were notified. When they went to the house some time later with Reardon they learned that the girl had been spirited away a few hours before. Reardon placed the Wolf woman under arrest, and also locked up two women inmates of her house in the House of Detention as witnesses, because they declared that a giri answering the missing girl's description had been living in Sadie Wolf's house. The Volf woman was held for examination, and in the mean time the search for Pauline Garfinkel continued.

According to Reardon, when the parties responsible for the girl's disappearance learned that the county detectives were hot on their trail, they placed her in the boarding house in which she was found. Her identity was unknown there and her room rent was paid in advance. She was at last traced to this place by the detectives, and the arrest of those whom she implicated in her misfortunes followed. Detective Reardon was quoted in ar evening paper last night as saying that Capt. Cottrell and the police of his precinct had tried to put every stumbling block in his way in his search for the girl and that he would complain to District Attorney Jerome about it. Reardon said last night: "Capt. Cottrell did not in any way interfere

"Capt. Cottrell did not in any way interfere with me, and I have no complaint whatever to make against him. He did everything in his power to help me. I may have criticised the police for not making an arrest in the Wolf woman's house. It was not, however, in connection with the disappearance of this girl, but on account of the character of the house."

Capt. Cottrell said that as soon as he learned of the character of the house he told the Wolf woman she must move out of the "She told me," he said, "that the Gar-finkel girl, who is supposed to be under age, appeared to be over 19 years old. She said the girl claimed to be that age. She

STATIONARY UMBRELLAS PLY. With Large Passenger Lists Through the Rain-Fare, One Nickel, Five Cents.

Many folks who cannot interpret the subtle meanings of aerial signs, and who are often as wise as those who think they can, went to seaside places yesterday without umbrellas. If they had had any faith in the official prophets they might have seen by reading the morning papers that there might be "showers in the afternoon or at night." SHE SLID DOWN THE POLE. Startled the Firemen, Blushed, and Ran Out of Headquarters.

ORANGE, N.J., May 30 .- A story of a little episode which occurred at fire headquarters on Saturday afternoon has just leaked out, and for certain reasons the name of the principal is being withheld. Chief Engineer James W. Hodgkinson was showing a party of young women through the building and had reached the dormitory. One de-mure young miss was attracted by the shining pole down which the men slide to reach the apparatus.

"What's this for?" she inquired. "What's this for?" she inquired.
The chief explained, and the young woman said "Oh," and leaned over to peer down.
In a moment there was a scream and the men on the floor below were startled by a sudden apparition of white, preceded by two plump objects incased in black lace spotted with red. The objects landed on the rubber mat, and the men discovered that they supported the demure young woman. She picked herself up with a nervous laugh, blushed crimson, and rushed out to the street.

RECORD CROWD AT CONEY. Collision of Shoot the Chutes Boats Gives Pleasure Seekers a Ducking.

A holiday crowd, the largest that has ever been seen at Coney Island, visited the various amusement resorts at that place yesterday. Steamboats, trolleys and trains carried to the seashore gayly dressed and happy looking people from the greater city as well as from places up the State. The weather indications were threatening all day, and at nightfall the clouds pened, and a deluge of rain fell upon the 150,000 pleasure seekers on the streets and in the amusement parks. There was a scampering for cover. Surf avenue was a sea of water in five minutes after the storm began—and the wet and bedraggled young women and their escorts were com-pelled to wade up to their shoe tops to reach shelter.

At 4 o'clock in the afternoon, when the crowd was at its greatest and in plain view of 5,000 persons, a collision occurred between two of the boats on the shoot the chutes in Dreamland Park. The impact threw the occupants of one boat into the water, while several of those in the second boat were sent flying over the heads of their fellow pleasure seekers into the boat with which the collision had second.
